A Note from ABS Kids

What a month September has been! From exciting events to major milestones, our team at ABS Kids truly went above and beyond.

We've had unforgettable moments and incredible achievements worth celebrating.

Let's take a look at what made September one to remember!

This month's Autism Weekly podcast touches on a topic many families may not have thought about — how Title IX, a federal law addressing sexual misconduct in schools, can uniquely impact children with autism.

Jessica Wilbur, one of our ABS Kids team members, shared her personal journey after her son Christopher, who has autism, found himself involved in a Title IX investigation due to a misunderstanding. Her story highlights the challenges families can face in these situations, where the intent behind actions and the way they're perceived can be very different for neurodivergent children.

Jessica's experience is a reminder of the importance of understanding and compassion in these cases. We encourage you to watch this episode for helpful perspectives that may support your own family or others navigating similar challenges

A Message from Cristina L:

Yessenya R.'s kiddo did so well during session and followed rules while making friendship bracelets (keeping them in the container, being extra careful with the small pieces, sharing, being mindful of what charms others wanted and made some for mom, sister and BT) Your hard work pays off Yessy!

Along my first Shadow session I had my first wow. First was just finally spending 4h time with one of ABSkids learners was very exciting. Even though I did not know the kiddo and just had a shadow with him I was there on a great day. The learner had many amazing moments with speaking english, as the learners family house is bilingual, and doesn't speak english that often! It was increbile to be a guest in this session and get more familliar with the job :)
